

Safe and healthy picnics

Warm sunny weather encourages outdoor activities like walking, cycling, swimming, or a friendly game of wiffle ball. Take advantage of a local or state park and all their offerings this summer by planning a picnic with family or friends. Summer is also peak season for many fruits and vegetables. It makes sense to combine them. But bacteria can grow rapidly in warm weather. Keep your family and friends from getting sick by following these food safety picnic tips.

Have a way to wash your hands. It's not always easy to wash your hands at a picnic. You may be in an area where restrooms or hand-washing facilities are not available. Pack extra bottled water, soap, and disposable towels for hand-washing. You can use hand sanitizer or hand sanitizing wipes (these are different than disinfecting wipes used for cleaning) as a backup option if necessary.

Pack smart. Take only the amount of food you'll eat. Pack small quantities of food so there is no food waste or leftovers to worry about. You can plan a picnic with simple nutritious menus like peanut butter and jelly on whole-grain bread or crackers, fresh fruits and vegetables, yogurt-based dips, baked chips or pretzels, and mixed cheeses. Bring bottled water or try flavored or infused water to keep hydrated while outside.

Keep food out of the danger zone. When traveling with food, keep cold foods cold and hot foods hot. Bacteria multiply quickly between 40 degrees F and 140 degrees F — the danger zone. Use a cooler when transporting perishable food to keep temperatures at 40 degrees or below to limit bacterial growth. This includes cut fruits and vegetables.

You can use frozen water bottles, gel packs, or zipper bags of ice to keep food cold. Place the cooler inside the air-conditioned car when traveling and not in the trunk. Store it in the shade once you've arrived. Do not take hot food on a picnic unless you have a way to keep it 140 degrees F or above during transport and serving.

Separate raw from ready to eat food. If you plan to grill during your picnic, make sure to transport raw meat in a different cooler than other foods. Bring plenty of plates and utensils so you don't place cooked meat (or other food) on the same plate that held raw meat or its juices. Remember to bring a meat thermometer to ensure grilled food reaches the proper internal temperature. Cook beef burgers to 160 degrees F, pork chops to 145 degrees F, chicken to 165 degrees F, and hot dogs according to the package directions. Consider grilling vegetables too. You can cook them right on the grill or in a foil packet to your desired doneness.

Don't let food sit out. Food should not remain at room temperature for more than two hours. Throw away any leftovers that have been sitting out for more than two hours, 1 hour if the temperature is above 90 degrees F.

With a little planning, you can make your next picnic a safe and healthy outdoor event.
