the state committed $25 million to support the Elizabethtown Community and Technical College BlueOval SK Training Center, which leaders broke ground on in May 2023.

The production news comes just days after Beshear joined Ford Motor Co. CEO Jim Farley, other company executives and local officials to announce a nearly $2 billion investment — the third largest in state history — at the Louisville Assembly Plant to serve as the platform for an all-new, yet to be unveiled, electric mid-size pickup truck.

Ford's August 2025 investment builds on the best five-year period for economic growth in state history, including $13.1 billion in EV-related investments from companies across the globe following the BlueOval-SK On announcement.

The partnership is in the midst of a unionization effort backed by the United Auto Workers Union and has been wrought with delays as production for Kentucky 2 is on an indefinite pause as it evaluates market changes related to government-backing of electric vehicles and consumer reluctance to embrace the change from gasoline-powered internal combustion engines. Reports have surfaced that the company is in talks with Nissan to use the second facility.

Last week, Ford announced the delay of production for its next generation electric F-150 Lightning until 2028 at BlueOval City in Stanton, Tennessee. The company also pushed back production of its electric transit van at its plant in Ohio from 2026 to 2028.

Prototypes of the truck will begin production at BlueOval City in 2027.

"BlueOval SK is creating good-paying, American jobs in the heart of the Commonwealth,"

Adams said. "We are strengthening the domestic supply chain and driving the transition to zero-emissions transportation."
