ANSWER TO THURSDAY'S PUZZLE:

CAROLYN HAX
Husband wants to get real about bad news

BY CAROLYN HAX
tellme@washpost.com

Dear Carolyn: Since the beginning of the new presidential term, the reported news has been unrelenting, depressing and upsetting to me. As an avid newsreader, I have found my personal habits have changed. Instead of digging in, I try to lightly read the various major newspapers. I no longer watch news on TV. My goal is to keep my morale above water and not drown in all the depressing news. I also tend to try to see the best in people and their decisions.

My new behavior has me feeling like an ostrich with her head in the sand. Recently, I acknowledged my ostrich behavior to my husband, saying how nowadays I can't even talk about all the bad news with others anymore. When I do, I feel paralyzed with depression.

He accused me of not wanting to acknowledge the truth in the world and not wanting to recognize that some people are truly evil. Essentially, he thought I should get more real and drop my Pollyannaish view of life.

Later, I thought about what he said and wondered if he was right. It hurts because wanting to believe the best in people is a hallmark of who I am. — Ostrich

Ostrich: Pollyanna never struck me as a big consumer of news. I mean, how does she feel about serial killers, granny scammers and corporate polluters? They're perennial news fare, yet she makes no mention of a morale hit before now.

You find recent news disorienting, I understand, and you're hardly alone. But I think you're looking for greater meaning in your upset than necessary.

Wanting to skim headlines and hide (for a while) doesn't mean your entire worldview belongs in a dumpster, or that you're too fragile a bird to handle the new information. It's possible, sure. But your impulse to withdraw could just mean you're getting so much unwelcome change at such a relentless clip that you need to give your processing functions more time.

Needing time is not the same thing as denying reality. It doesn't mean you were blissfully unaware humans could, say, cheer on a billionaire cutting safety nets out from under the poor — or you needed to pretend they wouldn't, just to choke down your morning coffee.

If you and I have been reading the same news in our lifetimes, then you've read about enough slaughter of enough innocents to put any optimism you have about humanity to as grim a reality test as any your husband could conjure. What "avid news-reader" hasn't known the darker side of humanity for quite some time — and doesn't need a good sand dive sometimes.

I hope you weren't really "accused" by your husband of anything, and instead your reading of him is out of scale? Not to minimize your feelings or impugn your judgment, just to offer the possibility that it's part of the overwhelm package. Maybe he and I are coming at the same-ish thought, from different directions.

Ideally, any notion of "who I am" won't be reactive to things as external as national news, no matter how immediately felt — so if your lost feeling persists, then that's worth exploring in depth. Meanwhile, though, yours is a rational response: Step back from the thing that keeps hitting you in the face, to give any swelling a chance to go down.

Alejandro Kirk singled home the winning run in the 10th inning and the Toronto Blue Jays rallied from a 6-0 deficit to defeat the visiting Boston Red Sox 7-6 on Wednesday night.

Anthony Santander had tied the game with a three-run home run in the seventh. Daulton Varsho added a two-run blast and Kirk hit a solo shot to help Toronto square the three-game series up at 1-1.

Cardinals 6, Reds 0 (G1): Masyn Winn belted two homers and Miles Mikolas allowed just three hits over 5 1/2 innings to lead St. Louis in the opener of a day-night doubleheader. Mikolas (1-2) struck out four and walked none in Cincinnati.

Cardinals 9, Reds 1 (G2): Willson Contreras belted a three-run homer and Pedro Pages added a solo shot in the doubleheader sweep.

Tigers 7, Astros 4: Javier Baez blasted a grand slam in the third inning as Detroit salvaged the finale of a three-game series with host Houston.

Rockies 2, Braves 1: Colorado snapped an eight-game losing streak as Chase Dollander and three relievers allowed visiting Atlanta just three hits and Brenton Doyle delivered the winning homer.

Padres 5, Giants 3: Michael King (4-1) notched six strikeouts while allowing one run and three hits over 5 2/3 innings, and Elias Diaz homered to help host San Diego secure the two-game sweep against San Francisco.

Guardians 4, Twins 2: Bo Naylor's three-run homer capped off a four-run seventh inning, and Luis Ortiz tossed a season-high 6 1/3 shutout innings in Cleveland.

Orioles 5, Yankees 4: Six Baltimore relievers kept New York mostly in check and Ryan Mountcastle and Ramon Urias homered for the host Orioles.

Mariners 9, Angels 3: J.P. Crawford's two-run single broke a tie in the seventh inning and the hosts went on to sweep a two-game set.

Dodgers 12, Marlins 7: Tony Gonsolin, pitching in the majors for the first time since August 2023, struck out nine in a home win. Gonsolin (1-0), who had elbow surgery on Sept. 1, 2023, allowed three runs on six hits and didn't issue a walk in six innings.

Pirates 4, Cubs 3: Andrew McCutchen drove in two runs with his lone hit to help the hosts snap a three-game slide.

Royals 3, Rays 0: Noah Cameron took a no-hitter into the seventh inning of his major league debut, propelling the visitors to a shutout. Cameron (1-0) allowed just one hit while walking five and striking out three after being called up from Triple-A Omaha before the game.

Phillies 7, Nationals 2: Kyle Schwarber hit a three-run home run and J.T. Realmuto and Max Kepler socked solo shots in Philadelphia.

Diamondbacks 4, Mets 3: Pinch hitter Gerardo Perdomo's two-run single in the seventh inning put visiting Arizona ahead, and it withstood a ninth-inning rally by New York.

Athletics 7, Rangers 1: Brent Rooker lined a two-run tiebreaking homer in the ninth inning and Lawrence Butler followed with a grand slam in Arlington, Texas.

Brewers 6, White Sox 4: Jake Bauers ripped a two-run tiebreaking double during a three-run eighth inning in Chicago.
