

Corvette Museum to mark anniversary with display of godfather's car

BY PAXTON MEDIA GROUP

After a multi-year preservation effort, the only Corvette ever owned by Zora Arkus-Duntov, the legendary “Godfather of the Corvette,” will make its public debut during the National Corvette Museum’s 31st anniversary celebration, Aug. 28-30.

Zora’s personal 1974 custom two-tone blue Corvette Stingray, a retirement gift from Chevrolet, has been preserved by the Museum’s Collections and Preservation team. The body was carefully lifted from the chassis to allow full access to the frame, suspension and underbody, a statement from the museum said. Each component was documented, cleaned, stabilized and reinstalled to preserve its originality. Even the creased leather armrest on the driver’s side, stressed from years of Zora’s elbow resting while he drove, was left untouched.

“This car represents Corvette history in its purest form,” Robert

Maxhimer, National Corvette Museum director of curatorial affairs and education said in the announcement about next month’s unveiling. “Preserving Zora’s personal Corvette is the first of many in-depth preservation projects that will ensure our collection lasts for generations.”

Zora Arkus-Duntov, inducted into the Corvette Hall of Fame in 1998, was instrumental in transforming the Corvette into a world-class performance car.

His personal 1974 Corvette

Stingray is equipped with a 454 big block engine, automatic transmission, air conditioning, power steering and brakes and aluminum wheels.

The car originally was silver, then repainted green. Later, Zora brought it to a friend who offered to give it a new paint job. Unaware of the final plan, Zora was surprised to receive the vehicle in a custom two-tone blue livery, complete with his initials, “ZAD,” on the doors.

He was pleased with the result. His wife, Elfi, commemorated the moment by creating a painting of Zora standing beside the Corvette. A small decal reading “Zora Arkus-Duntov Engineering Center” remains on the rear deck, serving as a quiet tribute to his legacy.

The completed preservation will be unveiled as the cornerstone of a reimagined Corvette Hall of Fame exhibition, launching during the anniversary weekend. Attendees will get insight into the preservation process during expert-led sessions, according to the announcement.

Bernheim unveils new Tin Man sculpture

‘Heart of the Forest’ stands as connection for art and nature

Bernheim Forest continues to bridge the gap between art and nature with its latest installation, “Heart of the Forest.”

Deep into the more than 16,000 acres of Bernheim’s land at the Jackson-Yoe trailhead stands the Tin Man. The 27-foot-tall sculpture by Pennsylvania-based artist Bill Secunda is “Heart of the Forest” — a metal work of art serving as a symbol of transformation.

KATELYN NORRIS/Paxton Media Group

Jenny Zeller, Bernheim arts in nature curator, and Mark Wourms, Bernheim president and CEO, talk about the new Tin Man art installation, “Heart of the Forest.”

of the Forest” is meant to greet and pull in visitors to experience more of what Bernheim has to offer, including the work done to improve pollinator habitats on Forest Hill Drive.

Dr. Mark Wourms, Bernheim president and CEO, said the tin man welcomes people into nature. He said once forests were intimidating, but now they’re seen as tranquil. Inspired by the character in the “Wizard of Oz,” the sculpture is meant to remind visitors to take heart and lead with compassion when caring for nature.

“What we love about that is it says that nature and Bernheim are welcoming to all people,” he said. “Nature at Bernheim is good for your health, both mental and physical. We want the Heart to represent (that) Bernheim cares about people, community and nature, and when you care about all three, you can have a healthy world moving forward.”

Part of the trailhead’s upgrades includes its accessible pathway and new signage coming soon. Zeller said they wanted the space to be open to all visitors to Bernheim. In the future, she said they will be building an ADA complaint bathroom at the Jackson-Yoe trailhead as well.

“I do think the change of heart that the Tin Man has is really representative of putting his ax down and now standing up and protecting the forest,” Zeller said.

“Heart of the Forest” is not the only installation at Bernheim, but a continuation of their merger of nature and art. Zeller said they already have received 160 applications for the next round of works for the L+A+N+D art installations.

In August, Bernheim will host Connect, which intersects music, art and nature, while showcasing regional artists.

The Monarchs return to Live at the Park in Bardstown

BY PAXTON MEDIA GROUP

The Monarchs are set to return to the stage at My Old Kentucky Home State Park in Bardstown on Monday as part of the 2025 Budweiser Live at the Park Concert Series hosted by The Stephen Foster Drama Association.

The Monarchs, a classic group based in Louisville, have been performing since 1961 with their brand of doo-wop and old-time rock and roll. The band performs hits such as “Look Homeward Angel,” “Great Balls of Fire,” “Run Around Sue,” “Whole Lotta Shakin’,” “Runaway,” “My Girl,” “Turn Around,” “Old Time Rock n Roll,” “Twist and Shout” and more.

“The Monarchs are always a great addition to our Live at the Park Concert Series lineup and we are excited to once again welcome local royalty to the stage,” said Johnny Warren, executive artistic director for The Stephen Foster Story and SFDA.

Other upcoming concerts in the 2025 Live at the Park Concert Series include The Classic Rock Experience on Friday, Aug. 15, and Boys in the Band: The Music of Alabama on Friday, Sept. 5. Nathan Chester and the Old Soul Motown Revival kicked off the series in June, followed by a performance from Journey from the Heart earlier this month.

All performances in the series are set for 8 p.m.

Season tickets are available and cover the cost of all concerts in the series, along with admission to a performance of “The Stephen Foster Story” and the Stephen Foster Drama Association’s production of “The Sound of Music.” Season passes cost $180 and all season ticket holders receive waived ticketing fees and renewable reserved concert seats each year.

To purchase tickets, go to stephenfoster.com/tickets. A $4 processing fee is applied to all tickets.

Tickets for individual concerts also are available. The ticket price for The Monarchs and the Classic Rock Experience is $26, while tickets for Boys in the Band are $30.
