

WORK CONTINUES AT Trojans Field where a number of contractors are removing the old track and replacing it with an oval that will allow the local high school to host track meets. A new drainage system is also being installed along with a watering system for the football field and new lighting at the facility. Work is expected to be completed in time for the fall sports season.

God Knows You

By Dr. Bob Hardison

When You Worship God, Your Life Will Soar!

Q: I go to work daily, and I come home to eat and watch some sports on TV. I’ve been doing this same daily routine for years. Tomorrow I will do the same. My daily routine has become tiring and boring. Where is the energy and the meaning I thought I would experience in life?

A: Let me cut to the chase. You’ve left God out of your life! And consequently, your life has become meaningless. What you want in life and sports have become your idols.

Only God is worthy of our worship. Isaiah, the prophet, spoke truth, “Do you not know? Have you not heard? The LORD is the everlasting God, the Creator of the ends of the earth. He will not grow tired or weary, and his understanding no one can fathom. He gives strength to the weary and increases the power of the weak” (40:28, 29).

God stepped into our lives by becoming our Emanuel, “God with us” (Mt. 1:23). He gives us His presence and His love. As our heavenly Father, He initiates forgiveness of sins and closeness with Him. Through turning from our sins and putting our faith in Jesus, we can experience an abundant life here and now and eternal life with Him forever.

When you love and worship God, He gives you His strength and energy to live a triumphant life. As a child of God, you can worship and glorify God in your daily activities. Through worshipping Him daily you can run. You can work hard. You can play hard. You can soar!

Container Gardening Is Great For Small Spaces

By: Vicki Shadrick

Container gardening turns even the smallest balcony or stoop into a pocket-sized farm. If you rent an apartment, battle heavy clay soil, or just prefer vegetables closer to the kitchen door, planting in pots lets you sidestep many headaches that come with traditional plots. The method also works for those with limited mobility as containers can sit on a sturdy table or a rolling platform, bringing those veggies up where bending and kneeling are not required. Pots let you match each crop to its favorite microclimate. A lettuce tub can chill in afternoon shade, while an eggplant basks beside a sun-soaked brick wall that stores extra heat.

Moving crops from ground to container now and then even plays a role in crop rotation; shifting soil out of the disease cycle keeps problems such as wilt or root rot from getting a foothold. Almost any vegetable will grow this way, yet leafy greens, herbs, bush beans, peppers, and cherry tomatoes shine. Plant breeders have created compact “patio” versions that load fruit on short stems. One large pot can hold a cherry tomato, another supports a dwarf pepper, and a shallow tray brims with spinach. Remember that every plant sharing a container must enjoy the same amount of sunlight and moisture, or one partner will suffer. The container itself matters less than drainage, volume, and weight. Clay and wooden pots breathe, so roots rarely drown, though you’ll water more often on hot days. Plastic, metal, or glazed ceramic hang onto moisture longer, which is handy during vacations but demands restraint with the hose. No matter the material, drill or punch several quarter-inch holes near the bottom and raise the base on bricks or pot feet so extra water can escape. Dark, pint-sized pots heat up fast; keep them out of relentless sun unless you’re growing chilies that adore warm roots. Fill your container with fresh soilless mix, not ground soil. The bagged blend of peat or coir, vermiculite, and compost stays light, resists compaction, and comes free of weeds. Moisten it the day before planting; dry peat sloughs off water at first, so give it time to drink. Mix a slow-release fertilizer into the top few inches or plan to feed weekly with a half-strength liquid fertilizer once seedlings sport their second set of leaves. Tall or vining crops need backup from the start. Slide a tomato cage, bamboo stakes, or a small trellis into place at planting so roots remain undisturbed later. On a windy balcony, secure cages to the railing or slip the container inside a larger, heavier planter. Check moisture by sticking a finger two knuckles deep; water only when the mix feels dry. Soak until you see water run from the holes, then empty saucers so roots don’t sit in a swamp. During blistering weather, move pots to temporary shade or cluster them together where foliage casts mutual cover. When lettuce bolts or beans finish, pull the spent plants, toss the used mix onto a compost heap or garden bed, scrub the container with a 10% bleach solution, and start planning the next round. With a small stash of pots, fresh mix, and a bit of attention, you’ll harvest salads, salsas, and stir-fry ingredients right outside the back door—no backyard required.
